

In a real product, the model is a small part of a much bigger, costlier system.